### PSYCHOLOGICAL REPORT

The subject's handwriting features reveal several notable personality traits. The slant angle of 5 degrees indicates a little inclined orientation, suggesting a tendency to be friendly, responsive, and possibly manipulative or intrusive in communication. The letter size of 26.17 pixels is classified as BIG, indicating that the subject is likely extroverted, outgoing, and confident, or may put on an act of confidence, especially around familiar people.

The pen pressure of 191.92 signifies HEAVY pressure, which shows a strong commitment and a tendency to take things seriously. However, this also hints at a propensity to react quickly to perceived criticism, sometimes overreacting. The word spacing of 1.35 pixels is considered Medium Spacing, suggesting a balanced approach to personal space and communication. The line spacing of 1.72 pixels falls under Medium Spacing, indicating a moderate approach to detail and planning, neither overly focused on the big picture nor excessively concerned with immediate tasks.

The top margin of 1.26 pixels suggests Small Margins, which may indicate lack of control, unorganized thoughts, and lack of discipline. The baseline angle of 0.1 degrees is classified as a Descending Baseline, suggesting an unstable emotional state, potential impulsiveness, or repression, depending on other accompanying personality traits.

The loops detected in the handwriting are predominantly elongated like a straight stroke, indicating impatience to get tasks done efficiently. The dominant garland style is classified as Garland, with a high Garland Ratio of 0.934, suggesting a people-oriented personality. The subject likely enjoys being helpful, likes to be involved, and is open to supporting others.

Psychological Report

In conclusion, the subject presents a mix of traits that include extroversion, confidence, and a strong sense of commitment. However, there is also a tendency towards impulsiveness and a lack of organization, which might be due to the current emotional state rather than a permanent characteristic. The subject's inclination towards helping others and being people-oriented is notable, balancing out some of the more impulsive traits.
